

C58 1.e4 e5 2.♘f3 ♘c6 3.♗c4 ♘f6 4.♘g5 d5 5.exd5 ♘a5

	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13
1	d3 h6	♘f3 e4	♘d4[1] ♗c5	♗e3 exd3	♗b5+ c6	♗xd3[2] ♘xd5∓			∓
2	. . . . . .	. . . . . .	. . . . . .	c3 0-0	0-0 ♖e8∓				∓
3	♗b5+ c6	dxc6 bxc6	♕f3[5] cxb5	♕xa8 ♕c7	♕f3[6] ♘c6	c3 ♗g4[7]	♕g3[8] ♗f5N[9]	0-0[10] h6[11]

[1] 8.♕e2?! By far the most common, but it's not a good move. 8...♘xc4 9.dxc4 ♗c5∓ With a great position.
8.dxe4? Was played in a few old games. 8...♘xc4 9.♕d4 ♘b6 10.c4 White has played like this in a few games, including one by David Bronstein, but: 10...♘bd7-+ The engine is screaming that Black is completely winnning.

[2] On: 11.dxc6 We can just continue: 11...0-0∓ With a very active, and good position.

[3] A very good position for Black.

[4] At some moment we will recoup the pawn on d5, and Black has a good, and slightly better position.

[5] 8.♗e2 The old main line, and we will cover it in the next Chapter.
8.♗d3 The popular line nowadays, and we will look at it closer in Chapters 7 and 8.

[6] 10.♘c3? Played 21 times, somehow, but this is just losing. 10...♘c6 11.♘xb5 ♕d7∓ We can just develop our bishop, castle, and Bb7 will be a deadly threat.

[7] 11...♘d4? Doesn't work due to: 12.♕d1± And the knight has to move back again.
[12.cxd4 White can even take. ♕xc1+ 13.♕d1+- With a winning position for White.]

[8] 12.♕e3? Played two times, but the queen is exposed here. 12...h6 White has no good moves. 13.f3 Was played in the only game that reached this position.
[13.♘e4 ♘d5 With f5 next. 14.♕g3 f5 And White is basically out of moves. For example: 15.0-0 ♘f4-+ Just a horrible position for White.]
[13.♘h3 ♘b4 With the threat of Nc2. 14.♘a3 ♘bd5 15.♘xb5 White hopes for some counterplay. ♕c4 16.♕xe5+ ♔d7-+ Black has an overwhelming initiative.]
[13.♘f3 Here Black chases down the queen again. ♘d5 14.♕e4 ♘f4-+ f5 next, and Black is winning.]
13...♗d7 14.♘h3
[14.♘e4 Again Black has: ♘d5 15.♕e2 ♘f4 16.♕f1 ♘b4-+ Just winning for Black.]
14...♘b4 15.♘a3 ♘bd5 The queen now has to move again. 16.♕d3 ♗c5 Black is much better.

[9] 12...♘d4 This is how the main line continues, but involves quite some theory, and White might be well prepared.

[10] 13.a4 White is trying to open up the rook, and at the same time makes a prophylaxis against Nb4. 13...b4 Of course, we don't want to activate White's rook, so we close the file.
[13...♘b4? Doesn't work now. 14.0-0 ♘c2 15.♖a2+- White just moves the rook up, Black wasted two moves and misplaced the knight.]
14.0-0 h6 15.♘h3 ♕d7! Black is completely fine.
[15...g5 16.d4∞ Still fine, but we move ordered ourselves.]

16.d3 Best, according to the engine.
[16.d4 Probably the most logical move. exd4 17.cxd4 ♗e7∓ Amazing positional compensation.]
16...♗c5 Difficult for White to avoid repetition Nh5-Bg4-Bf5. For example: 17.♗e3 ♘h5 18.♕f3 ♗g4 19.♕e4 We can play on with Be7, or just make the draw by repetition.
19...♗f5=

13.d3? Is a mistake due to of: 13...♘b4! 14.0-0 ♘c2∓ Now the rook on a1 will fall, and this is just good for Black.

[11] 14.♘h3 g5 Attacking, and at the same time hindering White's pieces.
[14...♕d7? Is not good here due to: 15.d4 exd4 16.cxd4 ♗e7± And without the inclusion of a4 and b4, White can for example play Nc3, and is doing much better.]
15.a4
[15.d4 Here we can go: ♗d6 16.a4 exd4 17.♕f3 ♘e7 Here a crazy line begins. 18.♘a3 g4 (18...0-0= Is also possible with a complicated, but level position. ) 19.♕a8+ ♔d7 20.♕xh8 ♗xh2+ 21.♔h1 gxh3 Here White should accept the draw with: 22.♕xf6 hxg2+ 23.♔xg2 ♗e4+ 24.♔h3 ♗f5+= With a perpetual.]
15...g4
[15...b4∞ Important to realize that this is different than the b4 that we played against 13.a4, as here we have already committed to g5! Although this is still fine for Black, I prefer our main line.]
16.axb5 gxh3 17.♕f3 Forced, Rg8 was a devastating threat. 17...♘e7 Saving both pieces. And now e4 is a big threat. 18.d3 Against e4, and also preparing Be3. 18...♗g7
19.♗e3 Here we have a rather forced line. 19...♕c8
20.♖xa7 ♘ed5 21.b6 0-0 22.b7 ♕b8∞ After 12...Bf5N, white had to find 10 accurate moves, to reach this is a very chaotic position where the engine is saying that everything is 0.00, as usual :) Line Chapter 5-4. Ng5 8.Qf3/Ambitious Italian and Scotch for Black 2025